

Epics and Period Costume Films

A Reference List

A Brief Introductory Note

This list of period films is part of a much larger list which I've been working on intermittently for several years now in an attempt to create a guide/checklist of movies for anyone who wants to know more about film genres and film history. I felt that this particular genre list – epics and period costume movies – would be helpful for theater professionals and students alike, especially directors, designers and actors who need to research an era in history for a project they might be working on.

One important note, however – while I have gone to extraordinary lengths to be as precise as I can be about the time period/dates in which these movies are set, there will no doubt be some slight miscalculations about those dates. Film directors and their design teams often backdate and/or update their production design concepts for their own nefarious reasons. Take Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice, for example, which provides a particularly useful model. The novel was begun in 1796-97, under the title First Impressions, and several film and television versions of the novel are set in this late Georgian time period. Other versions, however, update to the Regency period (1811-20), while the 1940 version with Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier is ostensibly set in 1835, smack dab in the middle of the Romantic era, but the costumes (rumored to be recycled from Gone with the Wind) are from the U. S. Civil War era, with wide hoops and corseted bodices. Fortunately, I discovered this period confusion very early on in my research, but you can see how this might make some of the dates that I've referenced here just a bit tenuous. I've done my best, and would appreciate any feedback you might give me to make this as accurate as possible. In any case, I hope you find this list a useful reference, and if you spot any omissions or goofs, please feel free to e-mail me at delaney@ohio.edu. Enjoy!

A Note About Fonts and Asterisks

Titles in bold red font with an asterisk (*) represent the crème de la crème – first choice titles in each category. These are the movies you want to explore first.

Titles in bold black font are the second-tier – outstanding films that are the next level of artistry and craftsmanship. Once you have experienced the top tier, these are where you should go next. They may not represent the highest achievement in each genre, but they are definitely a cut above the rest.

Finally, the titles which are in a regular black font constitute the rest of the films within the genre. I would be the first to admit that some of these may actually be worthy of being “ranked” more highly, but it is a ridiculously subjective matter. Please understand that I “rank” these titles as carefully as I can, cross-referencing numerous sources and considering the opinions of a number of different experts, particularly about the many films I have not personally seen. But, ultimately, the decision comes down to my own biased valuation and I take responsibility for those decisions. (And would be delighted to have your input.)
